

HOXTON HOUSEWARMING

Guests at the Kimpton Gray are dependably sleek and stylish, outfitted as they are in the latest gear for their morning run or yoga class. The luxury boutique hotel's ongoing partnership with Lululemon allows both men and women to choose from a selection of four outfits from the front desk. You'll save room in your luggage without needing to pack workout togs (although each outfit is also available to purchase and take home). Les Clefs d'Or concierge Bobby Gonzalez recommends booking a session at Bottom Line Yoga, Room to Breathe or Bikram Yoga, all within easy walking distance of the Kimpton Gray. 122 West Monroe Street, grayhotelchicago.com

FLOATING MEDITATION

Hang in a soft silk hammock as you melt into total relaxation at Exhale Chicago's newest floating meditation class. This is the first and only Exhale Spa to offer this kind of instruction, adapted from one of Miraval's signature therapies. Both Miraval and Exhale Spa are now owned by Hyatt, and while Exhale is best known for barre and body sculpting, guided meditation signals a new focus for the brand in terms of psychological wellbeing. In the privacy of your own silk, you'll hear music and the instructor's soothing voice as you inhale deeply and gently move to unwind and release tension from head to toe. Expect to see more additions at Exhale focusing on the mind-body connection later this year. 945 North State Street, exhalespa.com

HAMILTON AS EXHIBIT

Hamilton fans can now further immerse themselves in this revolutionary musical, thanks to a new exhibit chronicling the American Revolution and the title character's crucial role as a Founding Father. "Hamilton: The Exhibition" includes in-depth scenography, music, and historical artifacts—the 360-degree and football field-sized interactive presentation conceived by Hamilton musical creator Lin-Manuel Miranda and producer Jeffrey Seller. It is designed to take visitors deeper into the life and times of Hamilton, from his childhood in the West Indian island of St. Croix to an untimely death at the hand of Vice President Aaron Burr. Tickets are $39.50, and after the Chicago launch, the exhibit will tour the country. Northerly Island, hamiltonexhibition.com

MIDWESTERN TIME

Chicago's watchmaking industry now rivals New York's for its diversity and creativity. On the thrifty end, there's Wolfpoint ($140 and up), then Le Coeur Watch Co. ($250 and up) for a bit of middle ground, but a recent favorite is a tad pricier. Founded in 2015, Oak & Oscar is an independent maker with a keen eye for modern flair. Its Jackson Chronograph, a 40mm manually wound flyback chrono (seen here)—with a 60-hour power reserve, date at 6 o'clock, and a stacked register at 3 o'clock that tracks minutes and hours—is a feast of simplicity and style, and at $2,850, a bargain for the build quality. oakandoscar.com

HI-TECH FACIAL FIX

Mario Tricoci might be best known for hair styling, but his salon's upping its skincare game, too, with a new RevitaPen dermal infusion treatment—a gentle but effective alternative to microneedling. You don't leave with any inflammation, and instead of puncturing the skin, the RevitaPen tool gently pulsates to push potent serums into deeper layers for a smoother, plumper, more radiant complexion. You'll notice results after just one treatment and since RevitaPen is non-invasive, there's no downtime. Available at all 14 Mario Tricoci locations in Chicagoland. 900 North Michigan Shops, tricoci.com
