

MOVIE NIGHT, ELEVATED

Every Sunday all summer long, JW Marriott L.A. LIVE is hosting movie night on its rooftop pool deck with upscale comfort food. Movies range from classics like Pretty Woman and Selena to action-adventures like Ironman. Start with chips and guacamole or salsa followed by quesadillas, chicken tinga tacos, hot dogs, or Wagyu beef or vegan Beyond burgers. Unlimited popcorn and complimentary soft drinks are included in the ticket price, too. Extend movie night with a special hotel package including 10 a.m. early check-in, 4 p.m. late checkout, breakfast for two, and complimentary valet parking. 900 W Olympic Boulevard, jwmarriottlive.com

DISAPPEARING ACT

Innovative permanent makeup artist Natalia Boleyn has created a new treatment to banish stretch marks, and it's especially effective on women of color. She uses tattoo technology without the ink, but rather a mix of serums, organic oils, and vitamins, precisely injected with a small needle to improve cellular turnover and rejuvenation of fibroblast cells, collagen, and elastin. The revitalizing concoction reduces the appearance of stretch marks, including decades-old stretch marks, with clients reporting a 20-100% reduction after just one treatment. Stretch marks will be red and inflamed for one to four weeks before gradually fading. 292 S La Cienega Boulevard, Suite 301, Beverly Hills, boleynstudio.com

TWICE AS NICE

Marya Khalil-Otto is at it again. The Vitality Institute CEO and founder of VI Peel, the first painless medical grade chemical peel, just launched a new ToxBooster treatment, combining her bestselling VI Peel to correct pigment issues, with a neurotoxin treatment (like Botox or Jeuveau) to reduce fine lines and wrinkles. Using the two in tandem treats both superficial and deeper layers of the skin simultaneously, enhancing and extending treatment results for a smooth, relaxed, and flawless complexion. Beverly Hills Rejuvenation Center is the leading provider of ToxBooster in Los Angeles and peak results are achieved approximately two weeks after treatment. 1860 S Sepulveda Boulevard, vipeel.com

FLAVOR TOWN

After shutting down following the onset of the pandemic last March, the sprawling open-air food and lifestyle market

Smorgasbord returned to downtown L.A. on July 4.

Open every Sunday, the mega emporium is brimming with the vibrant aromas of local culinary street food favorites, from churros to crispy pata and masala fries to mofongo. Grab a melon slush and browse a variety of luxury lifestyle vendors, too, from boho vintage apparel to handmade jewelry and candles. Expect cultural events, surprise pop-ups, and other goodies in store. A new 4,000-car garage is also on site. Open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. 777 Alameda Street, la.smorgasbord.com

FASCINATING FELLOW

Los Angeles' most ambitious young restaurateur, Philip Camino, reopens Fellow in Westwood with a new kitchen team and suave redesign. Diver scallop ceviche served in an avocado, roasted caramelized carrots over a bed of black rice, and sous vide striped bass with charred cabbage and miso are just a few examples of Fellow's chic California cuisine, driven by seasonal produce and sustainable seafood. Guests enter through a contemporary art gallery, admiring local and internationally recognized artwork while sipping a cocktail or glass of wine selected from the 2,000-bottle cellar, before taking a seat in the dining room, where David Bowie coolly watches over you with a cigarette in hand. 1071 Glendon Avenue, fellow.la
