A LANDMARK RENEWED

After a four-year closure for restoration, the Hotel Lutetia is accepting bookings again in April. The Art Déco- and Art Nouveau-influenced hotel opened in 1910 in the bohemian St. Germain neighborhood, and the renovation preserves its Left Bank design spirit while offering the modern amenities travelers require. A quarter of the 184 rooms are now suites, including seven individually designed and two penthouse suites. A new internal courtyard adjacent to the Salon St. Germain offers intimate alfresco dining, along with traditional French fare at the Lutetia Brasserie. The reopening comes with a special offer, including a wine and cheese welcome, guaranteed upgrade, and tour of St. Germain des Prés for those booking with Virtuoso.com. 45 Boulevard Raspail, hotellutetia.com

ARTISTS AND ROBOTS

Can a machine ever be equal to an artist? A new exhibition at the Musée du Grand Palais explores this question through a series of 20 art works—paintings, sculptures, mobiles, and music pieces, all generated by computer software and/or robots designed, programmed, and installed by artists of thirteen nationalities. This collaboration between man and machine presents the case for artificial creativity, and in honor of the new exhibit—which opens April 5th and runs through July 9th—the nearby Shangri-La Hotel, Paris is offering a special Galaxio chocolate spaceship Easter egg sculpture (seen here and available to order 24 hours in advance) from March 10th to April 5th that includes two tickets to the presentation. 3 Avenue General Eisenhower, grandpalais.fr/en

COLLECTOR'S PROMENADE

Coinciding with the Art Paris Fair and PAD Paris (a must-attend event for art and design aficionados), Le Meurice has invited the Gosserez and Maison Parisienne galleries to exhibit collection standouts in its grand rooms from April 3rd through the 8th. The collaboration will showcase pieces by young designers and artists chosen for their inventiveness and skill, such as wooden furniture by Valentin Loellmann inspired by emotional interactions, textile sculptures by Simone Pheulpin, and a mirror embellished by unconventional jeweler Lorenz Bäumer. These exceptional pieces will guide guests from the lobby through to Restaurant Le Dalí and the Galerie Pompadour, culminating in the Galerie Castiglione. 228 Rue de Rivoli, dorchestercollection.com/en/paris/le-meurice
