

SUMMER CAMP

Reconnect with your inner child this summer during weekends at Camp Dawson. Beginning in June, servers and bartenders at The Dawson restaurant double as camp counselors, serving house-made hot dogs, grilled cheese, sloppy joes, and other campfire-inspired fare. Also, sip “bug juice” bottled cocktails al fresco and other drinks inspired by the 2001 cult classic film, Wet Hot American Summer. For dessert, roast your own adult s’mores on the patio while listening to scary stories by the fireplace and take in a monthly “talent show” featuring local bands. 730 West Grand Avenue, the-dawson.com

FARMER'S FAVORITE

Each Wednesday night through the end of October, Travelle’s Chef Ricardo Jarquin and Pastry Chef Scott Green bring the freshest ingredients at the peak of ripeness from farm to table. Their dinner series features staple items the chefs picked out that morning at Green

City Market, for a one-off four-course menu ($55), with optional $20 wine pairings. Ten percent of proceeds from the menu directly benefit the Green City Market, Chicago’s year-round sustainable farmers collective. 330 North Wabash Avenue, travellechicago.com

ROOFTOP REVELRY

NoMI Garden, Chicago’s favorite insider rooftop, is back in business—an urban oasis on the seventh floor of the Park Hyatt, with city and sunset views. Its elegant 30-foot teak bar serves seasonal cocktails muddled and garnished with fresh herbs harvested from the rooftop planter boxes. Shared plates like smoked salmon beignets, flatbreads, and Dijon mustard-deviled eggs are served throughout the season. Or, try the Park Board and nibble on Midwest cheeses and house-cured and smoked prosciutto, lomo, and coppa, along with Cheesehead Pâté, using whole hogs from Slagel Farms. 800 North Michigan Avenue, nomikitchen.com
